HEAD COACH RICHARD ROKOS

- ❄️ Seven NCAA Championships
- ❄️ 12 NCAA West Regional Championships
- ❄️ 194 All-Americans
- ❄️ 34 Individual National Champions

Richard Rokos and Colorado Skiing. In 22 seasons, the combination has been synonymous with success. When he was promoted to head coach on July 3, 1990, the process to return a program that was eight years removed from an NCAA title back to national prominence took its first step. Twenty-two seasons, six national team titles, 32 individual champions and 185 All-Americans later, it is a program that has turned steps into strides.

Rokos, 62, is the 11th and longest tenured head coach in CU ski history, has guided Colorado to six national championships, winning NCAA crowns in 1991, 1995, 1998, 1999, 2006 and 2011. In addition, his Buffaloes have won individual titles (32 total) in 14 different years. That first team title came in his first season as head coach, a unique accomplishment in any sport, and served as a bookend for the school as it came on the heels of CU's first in football.

Only five coaches in CU history have coached their teams longer than Rokos has been at the reins of the ski team; all five coached at least 24 seasons and Rokos is the ninth to coach a team for two decades. With all of his teams qualifying for the NCAA Championships, his 22 trips to nationals are the second most by any coach in school history.

He has also coached the Buffs to 11 Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate Ski Association (RMISA) titles, the last coming in 2011, events that also serve as the NCAA West Regional, as well as eight runner-up finishes.

His skiers, alpine and Nordic, have posted 258 top 10 finishes at the NCAA Championships; that total includes 111 first team All-Americans, with 34 earning two-time single-year All-American mention, and 68 second-team All-Americans.

Under Rokos, the Buffaloes have won 55 of 135 meets they have skied in, including the six NCAA crowns and the 11 RMISA Championships/NCAA West Regionals (1991, 1993, 1994, 1995, 1998, 1999, 2002, 2006, 2008, 2010 and 2011). On 42 other occasions, CU has finished as the runner-up.

Though he has been notified on seven different occasions that he was the selection for the RMISA coach of the year, the last time for 2011, Rokos declines the honor for personal reasons, mainly that he doesn't believe in the philosophy and that the student-athletes deserve the credit.

One of Rokos' greatest accomplishments since taking over the program has been turning what was once essentially an individual sport, pulling divergent skiers—men and women, Nordic and Alpine, into a team event at CU. Prior to his arrival, the two units rarely saw each other prior to the national championships, as they trained and raced separately. But it was his philosophy, to be an educator as well as a coach, to understand the physical and psychological significance of a student-athlete and to introduce harmony and mutual support that has made it a more unified program. Credit Rokos himself for the strong camaraderie because there is very little that he asks of his skiers that he doesn't do himself. That includes 6 a.m. ice hockey games, off-season dryland training, mountain bike rides from Boulder to Winter Park and back, hiking Pikes Peak, playing soccer and rollerblading through Boulder.

Rokos, who also coordinates all alpine aspects of the program, was already very familiar with the CU ski program upon his hiring, as he was promoted from alpine coordinator to the post. He served one season (1989-90) in that role under his predecessor as head coach, Tim LaVallee, and was the head coach of Colorado's Alpine "B" Team for the two years prior to joining the varsity staff (1987-89). With Rokos tutoring the alpine skiers, the 1990 team finished third in both the West Regional and the NCAA championships, with one individual national champion in the latter.

Rokos brought to CU a great amount of racing and coaching experience. He competed in his native home of Czechoslovakia and internationally for 19 years before beginning his coaching career with the Czechoslovakian Junior National Team in 1977. The year prior to joining the junior national team, Rokos graduated from the University of Masaryk with a masters' degree in physical education, his emphasis in his diploma work was the use of ski slopes with artificial surfaces for slalom and giant slalom practice. In 1969 he earned his bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from the College of Machiner. He has additional course work in Prague (Level II International Coaching License), Colorado State (athletic training) and the University of Colorado (special education).

Leaving the Czech national team in 1980, Rokos went on to coach at several ski schools in Austria before finally coming to the United States to coach at the Grampian Mountain Ski School in Michigan the following year. He then spent four years (1984-87) working with the U.S. Pro Ski Tour before settling down in Boulder.

Rokos was the head alpine coach of the 2011 United States team that participated in the World University Games teams in Erzurum, Turkey. It was the seventh time he coached the team, having previously done so in 1995 (Jaca, Spain), 1997 (Mugu, Korea), 1999 (Zakopane, Poland), 2003 and 2007 (Tarvisio, Italy) and 2005 (Innsbruck, Austria). Combined, his athletes have brought home four gold medals, one by CU skier Katie Hartman in the Super-G in 2011, along with four silver and several bronze including one by a former Buffalo, Erika Hogan, in 2003. He was also the head coach of the entire U.S. Team in the 1997 event in Korea.

In 2006, he earned a Top of the Rocky Award as the region's top college coach as selected by the writers and critics of the Rocky Mountain News. The honor made mention of CU being the first-ever shorthanded team to win an NCAA title, recording the biggest second-day comeback in the meet, and Rokos specifically being mentioned by President George W. Bush when the Buffs were one of 12 teams invited to the White House. Rokos was saluted by the president, who called him a “proud American” in reference to his defecting to the States for freedom, which he also privately had mentioned upon meeting him, “There’s nothing like freedom.”

He was also selected as the 2006 Coach of the Year in the state of Colorado by the Sportswomen of Colorado Hall of Fame.

Rokos was born May 25, 1950 in Brno, Czechoslovakia. He and his wife, the former Helena Konecny, and then-18-month-old daughter Linda, left a communist-bound native homeland in 1980 for Austria where they spent a year preparing their visas, and defected from Czechoslovakia to the United States (Detroit) a year later before calling Colorado their permanent home beginning in 1982. He and Helena are the parents of two grown children Linda, now an alpine instructor at Eldora and Thomas, and one grandchild, Stella (14), who is also an avid skier.

ASSISTANT COACHES

Bruce Cranmer

Head Nordic Coach

Bruce Cranmer, a familiar name among skiing historians in Colorado, is in his 14th season at the head Nordic coach for the Buffaloes.

Cranmer skied collegiately for CU, helping the Buffs to two national championships in 1972 and '73 under coach Bill Marolt. He later went on to compete for the U.S. Ski Team from 1980-88 when he was a member of the 1985 World Championship team.

Longtime Coloradoans certainly know the name, as his grandfather, George, started the Winter Park Ski Resort in Winter Park, Colo., which has blossomed into one of the finer skier areas in the world.

Cranmer brought an outstanding coaching resume with him to Boulder and he has expanded it even further once he got there, as he was the head cross country coach at Vermont, helping the Catamounts to four NCAA Championships between 1989-2000. Vermont was also the national runner-up three different times under Cranmer and head coach Chip LaCasse.

In his tenure at CU, the Buffs have won three NCAA Championships, 2006, 2011 and 2013, and have finished in the top three at the national meet eight other times in his 13 years. He has coached 10 skiers to 12 individual NCAA Championships, including Rune Oedegaard and Joanne Reid 2013. He also has coached two athletes to individual NCAA Championship sweeps, first in 2006 when current assistant coach Jana Weinberger (then Rehema) won both the classical and freestyle championships and then in 2008, Maria Grevsgaard won both championships.

In the past nine years, CU has racked up 11 of those 12 individual championships and the Buffs have had at least one individual champion on the Nordic side in five of the last six seasons.

Others who have won individual NCAA Championships are Mari Storeng (2002, women's freestyle), Kit Richmond (2006, men's classical), Vegard Kjoelhamar (2009, men's freestyle), Matt Gelso (2010, men's classical), Reid Pletcher (2011, men's classical) and Eliska Hajkova (2011, women's classical).

The Buffs have also won the mythical Nordic national championship six times under Cranmer's tutelage, scoring the most Nordic points at the NCAA Championships in 2004, '06, '08, '10, '11 and '13, the only six times the Buffs have topped the Nordic points list since the NCAA went to a combined skiing championship in 1983.

CU's men's Nordic skiers have earned the most points at the NCAA Championship five times under Cranmer (2004, '06, '08, '10, '11), the only five times since 1983 the Buffs have topped that point total, as well. On the women's side, Cranmer's teams have earned more points than other women's Nordic squads five times under Cranmer (out of seven times in CU history), including in 2002, '06, '08, '11 and '13.

Cranmer's squads have eight times won races at the NCAA Championships, starting in 2002 when the women won both the classical and freestyle races. In 2004, '06 and '08 when the Buffs won the Nordic overall title, CU won three of the four races. In 2009, CU won the men's classical race, in 2010, CU won the men's classical and women's freestyle races and in 2011, CU won the men's classical and women's freestyle races. CU has won the men's classical race four of the past six seasons at NAAs. In 2013, the CU women won both the classical and freestyle races.

Grevsgaard set a new CU record when she won 24 races between 2006-09, eight more than any other skier in CU history, Nordic or alpine. Out of the 20 skiers that have won five or more races in a season, Cranmer has coached seven of them, including Grevsgaard's totals of 11 in 2008, matching the CU record, seven in 2007 and five in 2009, and Rehema's five in 2006, Gelso's five in 2010, Oedegaard's five in 2012 and most recently Reid's nine in 2013.

In Cranmer's first season in 2001, Storeng became just the seventh skier in CU history to earn two podium appearances in their first NCAA Championship as she was the runner up in the classical race and took third in the freestyle race.

A total of 21 of his athletes have earned 49 first-team All-America honors and in all, and he has had at least one first-team All-America performance each year and eight times CU has had four or more Nordic athletes earn first-team All-America honors, including a CU record five, accomplished in 2010. CU's four athletes earning first-team honors in 2011 earned a combined seven honors, the most in CU history, one more than the 2004 and '10 teams.

Including second-team All-America honors, Cranmer has coached 24 athletes to 80 such honors in his time at Colorado. In his time at CU, the Buffs have had 19 skiers win a total of 93 races, including 14 skiers winning 85 races since 2006. CU has won at least six races in each of the last seven years and four of those years the Buffs won 12 or more Nordic races throughout the season. The Buffs have twice swept all four Nordic races under his tenure, in 2008 at the RMISA Championships when Grevsgaard and Kit Richmond both swept the races, and in 2009 at the Alaska Invitational when Grevsgaard won both races while Gelso and Kjoelhamar each one a men's race.

In his time at Vermont, the Catamounts boasted 12 individual Nordic NCAA Championships including a pair of four-time winners in Thorodd Bakken and Laura Wilson and a pair of Olympians in Joe Galanes and Kerrin Petty. Former DU Nordic coaches Knut and Trond Nystad were also All-Americans under Cranmer's tutelage while at Vermont.

Cranmer also coached for two U.S. Olympic Teams, the 1994 squad in Lillehammer, Norway, and the 1998 team in Nagano, Japan. Outside of skiing, Cranmer spent time as a Quality Control Engineer on the Trans-Alaska Pipeline and as an Outward Bound instructor in Bertchesgaden, Germany.

Born September 15, 1950, in Denver, Cranmer graduated from Aspen High School. He won NBC's Survival of the Fittest in 1985 and won the overall Great American Ski Chase in 1986. He is also a Class 5 whitewater kayaker. He is married to the former Patricia Drislane.

ASSISTANT COACHES

Jana Weinberger
Assistant Nordic Coach

A five-time first-team All-American and two-time individual NCAA Champion for the University of Colorado, Jana Weinberger is in her sixth season as the assistant Nordic coach at her alma mater.

Already in her five previous season at CU, a total of 10 CU skiers have won 55 races while 11 different Nordic skiers have won 26 first-team and 39 overall All-America honors. Seven Buffs have also captured eight individual NCAA Championships, as well.

As a former student-athlete at CU from 2003-06, Weinberger raced 28 collegiate races, claiming 27 top 10 and 23 top five performances. Her most prolific season came her senior year in 2006 when she captained the national championship team and swept six consecutive races, including winning the individual championships in both the freestyle and classical events at the NCAA Championships.

As a result of her performance in 2006, she was awarded the Dick Schoenberger Memorial Award, presented to CU's most outstanding skier each season. When she won a pair of All-America citations in 2004, she became just the sixth women's cross country skier to accomplish that feat and first since former teammate and former assistant coach Mari Storeng in 2001. Weinberger was also the recipient of the Outstanding Nordic Woman award in both 2003 and '04.

Prior to her collegiate career, she skied for the Tartu Ski Club in Estonia. She also competed in basketball and track & field at Estonia Sport Gymnasium.

Born July 27, 1979 in Russia, the former Jana Rehema is the daughter of Udo and Veir Rehema. She graduated from the University of Colorado in 2006 with a degree in international affairs. She is married to former CU All-American and her predecessor as the assistant Nordic Coach, Dan Weinberger, and the couple has two children, Klara and Alexander.

Taggart Spenst
Assistant Alpine Coach

Taggart Spenst, a 2013 graduate of the University of Colorado, is in his second season as the assistant alpine coach for the Buffaloes.

Spenst skied for the Buffaloes from the 2009-12 seasons, helping the Buffaloes capture the 2011 National Championship, and the Buffs won the 2013 championship with him as an assistant coach.

He competed in 46 career races for the Buffaloes finished 43 of them. He had 23 top 20 performances and compiled eight top 10 finishes with his career best finishes being a sixth place in slalom in a 2012 RMISA qualifier race, while he took eighth twice in the GS, once in a RMISA Qualifier in 2009 and the other at the 2010 Utah Invitational.

Born July 31, 1998 in McCall, Idaho, he graduated from Summit High School before attending the Winter Sports School in Park City, Utah, to further his skiing career. At Summit, he helped his team to back-to-back Alpine team State Championships in 2002 and 2003, earning All-State honors as a freshman and sophomore. A dual sport athlete, Spenst also lettered two years in soccer at Summit and his 2003 team made it to the Elite Eight in the 4A Colorado Soccer State Tournament. His grandfather played collegiate basketball in Iowa. He enjoys following the Denver Nuggets, Broncos and Colorado Rockies. He also skied for Team Summit for 13 years and was on the Rocky/Central team for two years.

Jodi Mossoni
Administrative Assistant

Jodi Mossoni enters her 12th season with the Colorado ski program, having joined the east campus office staff in May 2002.

Mossoni is a Centennial State native and graduated from Berthoud High School before attending Colorado State University and beginning a career with StorageTek. She and her husband, Mark, are the former owners of the A&W restaurant in Louisville, Colo., and she is a former president of the Buffalo Belles.

She enjoys skiing, golf and doing scrapbooks of her two children, Kory and Joleen, both graduates of the University of Colorado. Kory was a four-year letter winner in football as a linebacker at Colorado before signing as a free agent and having a tryout with the New Orleans Saints.
